Wall Street's advance information that President Wilson's note to Germany was a same, moderate document and not a challenge to fight, which caused a boom in the market yester-day, was so thoroughly confirmed by the publication of the note to-day that the advance in prices was maintained. The market opened with a rush, and in spite of heavy liquidation by speculators, who closed out on the advances, prices generally increased during the first hour.

Elopement Leads to Blood Feud and Pistol Duels Follow in Streets.

Parental blessing did not come to pretty Carmelia Menchini of No. 462 Carroll Street, Brooklyn, when she sloped a month ago with August Laudusio of No. 699 Union Street, but instead there came a vow from her mother to break up the marriage and a declaration of a feud between the families. Since then the couple has been in hiding

The mothers of the elopers met this afternoon in front of No. 15 Garfield Place, where a daughter of Mrs. Laudusio keeps a grocery store. Mrs. Menchini demanded to know the whereabouts of her daughter, Mrs. Laudusio told her she did not know.

From under her apron Mrs. Menchini drew a revolver and fired at the other woman. The bullet pierced her right arm and she fell, while Mrs. Menchini, believing the wound fatal, ran, shouting that she was glad. As his mother fell Luigi Laudusio came on the scene. He drew a revolver and fired at the fleeing woman.

Haif turning Mrs. Menchini seemed to be trying to get her revolver to work again, but falling she ran again. Young Laudusio was following her, firing repeatedly, when a policeman seized him

In the police round-up Mrs. Menchini was charged with felonious as-sault and Laudusio with violating the suilivan law. Mrs. Menchini claimed Mrs. Laudusio's daughter, Louisa Masarelli, had assaulted her earlier in the day, and she was also arrested.
